Not illustrated. 1867 Excerpt: . in, the inner drum rises, giving space; as it escapes, this sinks, so diminishing the capacity of the vessel. Compound of Carbon with Nitrogen. Cyanogen--C, N or Cy. Sp. Gr. 1.82. Source.--Cyanogen is formed, in combination with potassium, by heating organic substances containing nitrogen, such as fibrine, gelatine, skins, etc., with potash. Preparation.--Obtained by heating Cyanide of Mercury. $\text{HgC}_2\text{N} = \text{Hg} + \text{C}_2\text{N}$. Properties.--A colorless, soluble gas; liquefiable by a pressure of four atmospheres. Its odor resembles that from bitter almonds. Burns with a dark blue flame fringed with purple. In chemical properties, it must be classed with chlorine and bromine; uniting, like them, with hydrogen to form an acid, and with the metals to form salts. It was the first one, among many compound bodies since discovered, which was found to play the part of an element; and the discovery of this Compound Radical, as such bodies are called, by Gay Lussac, in 1814, greatly simplified modern chemistry. Uses.--Its combination with hydrogen, Hydrocyanic, or Prussic acid, HCy , is a fearful poison, whose proper antidote is chlorine or ammonia, cautiously inhaled. Diluted, however, with 50 times its weight of water, it is employed to allay nausea, and as a lotion in skin diseases. Cyanide of Potassium, KCy , energetically dissolves the cyanides of gold and silver, and forms with them double cyanides, which constitute the gold and silver baths in Electroplating. Alone, Cyanide of Potassium is excellent for fixing Collodion Positives. Compound of Carbon with Sulphur. Bisulphide...
