To seek Jesus, the Nazarene, - which hath been crucified: he is risen; he is not here.--Mark, 16:6. WE sometimes, in foolish moments, think how rich would be our thought, how strong our faith, how great our action, if we, like Peter and John, could know Christ in the flesh. Yet there is no one of us that has not a vaster and better opportunity for knowing the Lord's character and mission than had any of the apostles, before the resurrection. Their conceptions of Christ as the Saviour, before they had received the illumination of the Spirit, were rude and material. And the doctrinal portions of the New Testament, which unfold the person and work of Christ, were written after long years of prayer, and toil, and brooding thought. They were a growth--the divine fruit of profound religious culture. The apostles were spiritual specialists. They discovered great religious truths, they gathered eternal facts, one at a time. Their knowledge came, as must ours, if it be vital, through personal companionship with Christ, and experience in his blessed service. And we of to-day have not only the fruits of apostolic learning and consecration, but also the heritage of ages of toil and study and prayer which the apostles had not. They walked in the dawn-light; the Sun of Righteousness is now high in the heavens. The Light of the World is not dimmed with burning, nor with age....
