The Act of the 10th of February, 1814, to raise three Regiments of Riflemen, section 4, idem, page 645. The Act of the 27th of January, 1815, to authorize the President to accept the services of state troops, and of volunteers, section 1 and 4, idem, page 778. The Act of the 3rd of March, 1815, to fix the military peace establishment of the United States, section 7, idem, page 825. The Act of the 24th of April, 1816, for organizing the General Staff, and making further provision for the army, section 6. Session, Acts of 1815, 1816, pages 71, 72. On turning to these laws, it is remarkable, that, in every instance, in which troops have been raised, or their number has been augmented by any accession, however trivial, or in which their number has been reduced to a peace establishment, or in which a new and distinct destination has been given to any portion of them, Congress has cautiously introduced a provision, that they shall be subject to the Rules and Articles of War; and what is still more remarkable is, that even after the general Act of 1806 had passed, declaring the Rules and Articles of War, and containing the permanent provision, that the armies of the United States should be subject to these Rules and Articles, Congress, not content to leave after-raised troops to the operation of that general provision, have, in every instance, repeated their sub/fction...
